Culligan Quench Launches Next-Generation XL1 Hydration Center and Expands North American Dealer Opportunities

King of Prussia, PA – Culligan Quench, a leading provider of bottleless filtered drinking water solutions, today announced the launch of its newest innovation—the XL1 Hydration Center—while opening new territories for independent dealers across North America.

Designed to meet the growing demand for high-performance workplace hydration, the XL1 represents the next generation of bottleless water technology. This ultra high-capacity system delivers unmatched performance with the largest cold tank on the market, providing nearly limitless ice-cold water even in high-traffic environments.

“The XL1 is a game-changer for businesses that need reliable, high-volume hydration,” said Marvin Salganov, VP Business Development. “It combines industry-leading capacity with advanced purification technology and an engaging, modern user experience. For copier dealers and office equipment providers, it’s an ideal solution to expand their product portfolio and generate recurring revenue.”

Advanced Features Built for Today’s Workplace

The new XL1 Hydration Center is engineered with premium features, including:

- A 15.4" full-color interactive touchscreen with customizable user options
- Ultra high-capacity multi-stage reverse osmosis filtration
- Dual in-tank LED UV lights to ensure pure, fresh water with every dispense
- Sleek, modern design ideal for offices, schools, healthcare facilities, and commercial environments

The XL1 joins Culligan Quench’s full lineup of bottleless water coolers, ice machines, and sparkling water dispensers—solutions that purify a user’s existing water supply to deliver convenient, sustainable, and cost-effective hydration.

Expanding Dealer Network Across North America

Culligan Quench offers its products through a robust network of independent dealers throughout the U.S. and Canada under the brand names Waterlogic, Pure Water Technology, and Wellsys. With the launch of the XL1, the company is actively seeking new dealer partners in open territories across North America.

“Demand for bottleless water solutions continues to rise as organizations prioritize health, sustainability, and employee experience,” said Marvin Salganov, VP Business Development. “We’re excited to partner with office technology and copier dealers who want to grow their businesses with a proven product line, strong service model, and recurring revenue opportunities.”

Dealers partnering with Culligan Quench gain access to a comprehensive portfolio of hydration solutions, sales and marketing support, training resources, and the backing of a trusted global brand.
